

Caring for Standedge Tunnel

We're the charity working to protect and bring to life this 250-year-old network of canals and rivers spanning England and Wales. Not so long ago many canals were abandoned, and some lost forever. Today, with your support, wildlife is recovering, history is alive, boats are plentiful and spending time in this environment is contributing to our health and happiness.

Our mission is to keep this extraordinary network of canals and rivers alive, teeming with wildlife, transforming places they run through and enriching all of our lives. Your support today could help us care for Standedge Tunnel and many more places, for today and generations to come.

Making life better by water

Keeping history alive

Construction work began on Standedge Tunnel in 1794. It was due to take five years to complete but was beset by problems. Eventually, 17 years later in 1811 the tunnel opened.

To keep costs down, the tunnel was built without a towpath. Horses towing the boats were walked over the hill above the tunnel. Empty boats were punted through with poles while fully laden boats were 'legged' through.

The tunnel was closed to all boat traffic in 1943. Following years of restoration work by volunteers from Huddersfield Canal Society, it re-opened in 2001.

Did you know?

To save on costs, it was decided to build the tunnel without a towpath. Instead, canal boats were legged through the tunnel. It would take professional leggers one hour and twenty minutes to take an empty boat through the tunnel, and three hours with a full load.
